Jetting to the Junction

Thought that was sweet? You'll enjoy:

When it comes to our décor style, we've never been able to settle on one firm aesthetic.

Thanks to following up on all the great things said about recent Junction addition Mjolk, all we've been feeling lately is streamlined.

Owned and operated by the super-friendly (and great bloggers) John Baker and Juli Daoust, the store is packed with some of the most distinct homewares we've seen.

Like the Newton Milk and Sugar Set ($70), or the smartest cast iron pot ($290) and grill pan ($185) known to womankind. There are larger pieces of furniture like the ridiculously comfortable Lamino sheep chair ($2950) and the Naoto Fukasawa Dining Chair ($1495) plus everything from lighting to umbrella solutions.

Now we can't settle on what to take home.
